

Comments from Congressman David Joyce

As the father of three, I believe it's time we have a national conversation on public safety focused on the question of how we best protect our children. During my time as Geauga County prosecutor, I saw first-hand the tragic effects of when certain individuals slip through our mental health system and therefore believe it's crucial that we address this as both a public safety and mental health issue. That said, we cannot let recent tragedies be an excuse for groups to either sell more guns or infringe on Second Amendment rights. We must address this important issue logically and find common sense solutions to ensuring the safety of our nation's children.
